“ I love this young man like he was my own son, my nephew I've know most of his life, words cannot express my emptiness knowing he's gone on, he always told me Uncle Mike you are my Guy! I've never known Lil Greg to be down no matter what he was dealing with he was always upbeat and trying to be humorous. He will be missed and I know the hurt I'm having will get better with time because I know he's with the Lord! That is all Christians goal. Family and friends I will leave you with this. ? The Bible teaches what will occur after death, First our immaterial soul and spirit will be separated from our physical body. Second, we will immediately receive the judgment that will determine our eternal destiny. Those who have trusted in Christ's payment on the cross for our sins will enter into eternal life in the presence of God. 2 Corinthians 5:8 states, "We are confident, I say, and would prefer to be away from the body and at home with the Lord." There will be no delay in a state of unconsciousness many call "soul sleep." We will immediately be in God's presence. Amen!

“ My brother and first cousin. Remember when grandma Jones would call us to go in the attic. She only wanted you or I to go up there after Fred fell thru the ceiling. And guess who fix the hole in the ceiling you and me. I remember we painted dang near every room together on 8th street. Also the trim outside. Lol you had me do the peak of the house above the porch because you were scared to get on that ladder. I was talking so much stuff but grandma got on me for talking stustuff to you. I can go on and on. You helped me remodel my house. When it was done you smiled at me and said to me that you were proud of me. I said thank you and I could not have gotten it done with out you. I will never forget you bro. I was a only child and you were the brother to 6 sisters. We needed each other. We stuck together thru everything. I will miss you tremendously cousin, or should I say I love you fam bam like I said the last time we spoke, and you replied I love you too cuddy.
