“ It's been almost seven years since you've been gone, Dad, and I still miss you. I miss our talks—the way you listened, the way you understood me even when I didn't know how to explain myself. There are moments in my life when I catch myself wanting to call you, just to hear your voice or get your advice.

I carry you with me in the things you taught me, in the values you passed down, and in the memories that still make me smile and ache at the same time. I wish you were here to see who I've become, but I hope you'd be proud. Not a day goes by that I don't think of you.

The family misses you too, Dad—more than words can say. We still talk about you and still feel your presence in our hearts. I especially miss the Bible talks we had, the way you shared your faith and wisdom with so much patience and love. Those moments stay with me and continue to guide me, even now.

*With love,
your son,
DR. JLC.*
