“ I remember so many of the dope conversations Shirlmarie and I had as I picked her up and dropped her off weekly. I learned so much from her and about her. We talked about life, family, our kids, God, the struggle, and jokes as well.

I learned from her (by God's grace) to not judge a book by it's cover because she is a very beautiful person at the core of who she is. I appreciated her honesty and sense of humor. I learned that she kept it real with herself and despite her challenging circumstances, and I admired how she still had personality. I appreciate the time that God allowed me to have with her, she was smart, funny, and a trooper. I was blessed by knowing her and getting to meet her and her family.

“ You greeted me with a smile and a song when we first met. You always showed me love as if I was your blood sister. In hard times you prayed for me. Spoke wisdom and life into me. You were my big sister. I'll never forget how you welcomed me into the family as a sister. You will always hold a special place in my heart.
